TIALITIES

Inaugurated in 1977, the annual arts festival went on a hiatus after 2012 and returned in 2014 under the baton of Festival Director Ong Keng Sen. With the mission to artistically reinvigorate and transform the festival, Ong renamed it Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA). He initiated The O.P.E.N., a pre-festival of ideas to engage diverse audiences with the ideas, issues and themes of SIFA. Today, SIFA is the premier national performing arts festival managed by the Arts House Limited and commissioned by the National Arts Council. It aims to inspire through great international and Singapore artistic experiences in performance, theatre, dance and music. For more info, visit: sifa.sg

FOUR DECADES EXHIBITION
Singapore International Festival of Arts 2018

Message from the CEO

This year's Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA) is presented around the theme of potentialities. Focusing on potential instead of actuality feels like a good plan in a year that brings economic volatility, an El Niño that seems to herald intensified global warming (with hotter days and more extreme patterns of precipitation) and no respite from the relentless destruction of humanity and nature, in our region and beyond.

Potentiality nurtures hope and inspires imagination. The process of art-making is a game of creating, prolonging and extending potentiality. Things always get tricky at the point of realisation, but even when potential has been actualised in performance, art creates room for further potential to be generated and recognised in response. Unpredictability is an important and beautiful part of potentiality, and to embrace this, one needs to be broad-minded, generous and courageous. There is just as much potential in art that one's aesthetic senses might be assaulted, values questioned and beliefs subverted, as there is that one's senses might be titillated and expectations fulfilled.

The art of an arts festival is the knowing of potential when potential is discovered, fearless of the actuality, and revelling in the unpredictable. For two editions now, SIFA has been on the hunt for potential, asking performers as well as audiences to actualise their potential on this annual platform. This year, SIFA seeks out the new potential in the old. For instance, it celebrates the longevity of Shakespearean potential in Sandaime Richard, itself a 25-year-old work by Hideki Noda, now actualised in a Japan-Singapore production. That is, after all, the definition of a classic: Four hundred years after the death of the playwright, the potential in his works remains inexhaustible. Through an endeavour of love by Checkpoint Theatre, The Last Bull: A Life In Flamenco ignites the potential in Antonio Vargas, the 75-year-old flamenco dancer who continues to dance in Singapore, a most unlikely context, and takes us on a wonderful journey of discovery and adventure. The spirit of potentiality leads the 20 shows in SIFA 2016, and we hope you will enjoy and find fresh insights in this Festival.

This spirit of adventure forms the backbone for us at the Arts House Limited, where the second life of SIFA flourishes since it was re-organised in 2013. We focus on the potential, rather than the challenges that punctuate our work, combining the fostering and nurturing of art-making with such other forms of businesses as events organising and property management.

If art can give individuals a sense of empowerment, it must be that art heads in the direction of potentiality. We want as much for you to enjoy the arts as to find in the arts your own potential to hope and to aspire for greater and better things.

Message from the Festival Director

At the start-up of the reinvented Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA) in 2014, I proposed a trilogy looking at the past, present and future. SIFA reviewed the past with 20th-century legacies in 2014, understood the present with our post-empires condition in 2015, and, in 2016, we investigate the future by examining potentialities. The potentialities of tradition (Paradise Interrupted), modern archives (In The Mood For Frankie) and contemporary technology (Ron Arad's 720°, Tropical Traumas: A Series Of Cinematographic Choreographies) are part of the continuum that we present this year. Strong this season are artists who have inspired the potential of others, from Bill T. Jones (Making And Doing) to Wu Man (Borderlands) and crowned by The Sardono Retrospective, our tribute to this extraordinary life in art.

Potentiality is the possessing of latent power or capacity capable of coming into being or action. It is an optimism that looks to the future rather than at the grimness of the present. With this as an organising theme, SIFA looks around the globe at world issues through a different lens. In this way, the Greek crisis is overturned as we experience the power of humanity to continue in spite of setbacks (Still Life). The ominous unknown is accepted or embraced rather than rejected by fear and cynicism. As world security is threatened by radical elements, we re-examine revolution with a play about post-Arab Spring Cairo (The Last Supper). For potentiality includes the dormant unrealised, before potential, and also what remains after, a reserve energy that will emerge again. What happens when you reset the clock and return to a new time as Argentine artist Fernando Rubio suggests (Time Between Us)? What happens when you return to the most intimate moment between two strangers, two individuals (Everything By My Side)?

Most of all, we celebrate the potentialities of individuals who are change agents and continue to be role models in challenging contexts. In our pre-festival of ideas The O.P.E.N., we present rocker Perhat Khaliq from Urumqi, Xinjiang, the 'Uncrowned King' of "The Voice Of China" who has wowed millions of people around the world. We can look beyond the face of terror with the dignity of an individual face that can once again remind us of the strength and integrity of one human being. "The will is not free to refuse this responsibility; it is not free to ignore the meaningful world into which the face of the Other has introduced it. In the welcoming of the face the will opens to reason." In this beautiful statement, Emmanuel Levinas brings us to the profound potentialities that are in the intercultural encounter with the Other. If the world is to survive, perhaps we need to stop stereotyping and return to the power of the individual.

For the individual exists in each and every one of us. The O.P.E.N. has a tagline this year, "Be Open To The INDIVIDUAL In You". It is easy to forget that each one of us has the potentiality to transform into an individual, to be a change agent.

The emerging artist (I Am LGB), the mature individual who is stereotyped as 'past his prime' (The Last Bull: A Life In Flamenco), the child (Five Easy Pieces)... these are all potentialities embodied in individuals. The eternal is not forgotten as we return to the potentiality in William Shakespeare with Robert Lepage and Evgeny Mironov, where technology meets the individual (Hamlet I Collage). Shakespeare's 400th death anniversary is ironically celebrated by putting him on trial to reveal what an individual writer should remain true to (Sandaime Richard). How should one express history, or can one continue to strive for and value personal freedom despite the ambitions of political power, economic prowess? As usual, art is provocative and allows us space for reflection in these intense times. The ancients wisely understood the meaning of Festival as a time of carnival, a time of Bacchanalia, which allows citizens to live with the reality of daily life. The Festival is a special time when rules are lifted, when hope is reinstated. I want to thank all who have contributed to this edition of Singapore International Festival of Arts.

THEATRE OF NATIONS
ROBERT LEPAGE

3 reasons to GO

1. Created by revered theatre director Robert Lepage.
2. High production values with startling video technology.
3. A masterful performance by one of Russia's greatest contemporary stage actors, Evgeny Mironov.

Hamlet | Collage is the first Russian production by legendary Canadian stage director Robert Lepage. Taking more than two years to create, the result is a high-tech, high-energy action performance designed for only one actor – Russia's national artist, Evgeny Mironov. Original, imaginative and totally inspiring, it is Shakespeare like you've never seen before.

Lepage states of Hamlet | Collage: "Hamlet's main problem is that he thinks too much. He doesn't find a solution to a task. He is a character who always uses his brain. All in all, a skull serves as a powerful symbol of the theatre and Hamlet. That's why Shakespeare devised a big scene with a skull, which – after all – is a human's head. I surely don't have answers to my numerous questions. That's why it was interesting to stage a play with a single actor, with the actor's head."

Indeed, Lepage and Mironov have both created a tragedy of the consciousness far more potent than the tragedy of real life. In this prison of the mind, set within the confines of a huge open-sided cube that is suspended and spun above the stage, Mironov magically plays all of the characters himself. From Ophelia to Polonius, he deftly walks, runs, leaps and reposes on its walls, floors and ceilings. Mironov's adroit performance is enhanced by Lepage's lighting and video design, which inventively turns the cube from a cell of a mental asylum, to a library, to the ramparts, to a bubbling pond, amongst numerous other vivid settings.

Already one of the biggest events of Moscow's theatre season, Lepage's Hamlet | Collage promises to be a visually stunning take on one of the Bard's familiar favourites.

Performed in Russian with English surtitles.

The Last Supper

BY AHMED EL ATTAR

3 reasons to GO

1. A piercing dark comedy that took France's Avignon Festival by storm.
2. An excellently written, razor-sharp social commentary with a universal appeal.
3. A superb ensemble performance.

Through its darkly comedic take on the life of a typical affluent family, The Last Supper highlights the inescapable emptiness that casts its shadow over the illusion of plenty and the hollow exchanges that masquerade as human connection. This clever and humorous tinsel of a play offers a zesty microcosm of what Egyptian society has become after the Arab Spring.

Written and directed by pioneering Egyptian independent theatre director and playwright Ahmed El Attar, The Last Supper transports us to Egypt, to the home of a well-off family as they gather around the dinner table. Through their vapid interactions, a feast of nihilism, absurdity and apathy is served. The cast brings to life the banalities of the contemporary Egyptian bourgeoisie. Each character embodies a self-absorbed philosophy mired in his or her preconceptions.

El Attar's provocative works have often offered insight into major social, political and economic issues and The Last Supper is no different. El Attar and his ensemble of 11 actors offer a farcical eulogy to futility that took Avignon Festival by storm in 2014 and has since travelled throughout Europe. Its acclaim is a testament that although the play takes place in Cairo, this last supper could very well be about all of us.

Performed in Arabic with English surtitles.

BY FERNANDO RUBIO

3 reasons to GO

1. A dreamlike performance.
2. Fleeting yet personal encounter with someone you may never meet again.
3. A play all to yourself, in a comfortable bed.

Celebrated Argentine artist Fernando Rubio is a dramatist and a visual artist whose works have been staged across Europe, South America and the United States. For Singapore International Festival of Arts 2018, Rubio creates uniquely Singapore versions of Everything By My Side and Time Between Us, two gripping performance pieces that will have you enjoying new space and time perspectives.

A brief encounter with someone unknown. A potential moment. A bed. An actress. A spectator. A performance in extreme intimacy.

Unforgettable.

Everything by my side.

Everything By My Side was born after a dream, as acclaimed Argentine artist Rubio remembers a long-lost childhood story that has been forgotten for 25 years.

Co-starring Singaporean veteran actress Margaret Chan, Everything By My Side is a miniature play in bed. In 10 white beds, 10 actresses lie side by side with individual audience members, whispering childhood memories to these silent observers.

These actresses represent the 10 different countries that Everything By My Side has toured to: Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Croatia, Uruguay, Holland, Spain, Greece, the United States, and now, Singapore.

Performed in different types of public spaces all over the world, each fleeting encounter of Everything By My Side evokes a deeply intimate moment in the middle of a bustling city, whether on a sunny pier, nestled amidst a shady park, floating on a pond or in an air-conditioned art gallery.

Performed in English.

BY SARDONO W. KUSUMO

CREATION

The Sardono Retrospective is a major showcase of this pioneering master performing artist from Southeast Asia. It is a unique occasion to witness and experience his paintings, films and dance choreography, a not-to-be-missed opportunity to see how an artist has evolved over the years by harnessing new ways to express himself. For this retrospective which traces his remarkable artistic oeuvre, Sardono W. Kusumo looks back on what he has learnt from working and performing in the last 50 years with the traditional cultures and arts of Indonesia and its 17,000 islands, where Sumatra and Java are very different from Borneo and Kalimantan.

Commissioned by Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA).

Sardono has created a number of experimental films exploring varied themes, from village life and Javanese mythology to environmental destruction and, recently, the Arab Spring. In particular, Sardono has made an extensive tribute to the great painter Raden Saleh, one of the earliest Asian painters living in Europe. Reminded of Raden, who once lived in the City of Light more than 100 years earlier, Sardono donned replica clothing, walking the Parisian streets and boulevards late at night and contemplating its atmosphere and mood.

Expanded Cinema is an eye-opening collection of archive footage, shot with an 8mm camera since 1970, and experimental films by Sardono. Never before exhibited, this personal collection with re-mastered old film prints reveals the background context of his famous modern kecak, the amazing monkey dance, which is seen by most tourists who visit Bali today.

3 reasons to GO

1. One man's revolutionary legacy from dancer to filmmaker to painter, an inspiring celebration of his extraordinary life and art.

2. Poetic visual images on film and in performance.

3. An unprecedented retrospective of Southeast Asia's greatest master of dance.

Although he began painting as early as the 1980s, dancer, choreographer and environmental activist Sardono Kusumo committed himself fully to the craft only in the early 2000s. His painting style is strongly influenced by his own highly expressive physical habits, informed by his well-trained dancer's body and a 50-year career in dance. Today, in an exceptional transformation in his life, he paints more than dances.

Sardono, who started training as a dancer when he was eight years old, explains: "Painting is related to the way I trained as a dancer. I use big-frame canvases and lift them to make the paint go up and down or dance. I don't make visuals. It is more about understanding the paints, the oils and not just the finished product hanging in a museum."

His expansive moves, muscular strength as well as expressive hands and fingers often give rise to a series of micro-movements, much like vibrations. Sardono uses these movements to produce abstract expressionistic paintings, using a rhythmic spectrum of paints and colours dripping down in vivid lines and textures.

The result: large-scale paintings, ranging in length from three to 20 metres that are the quintessence of visual motion. This includes the 2x20m abstract painting of the 2004 Asian tsunami's devastation on Indonesia's Aceh province.

Reminiscent of Jackson Pollock yet totally original, this encounter with the master choreographer himself, staged within the magnificent, intimate compound of the well-sited Malay Heritage Centre, is a sublime experience not to be missed.

3. An unprecedented retrospective of Southeast Asia's greatest master of dance.

"Hitam kulit, keriting rambut. Aku Papua."

"Black skin, curly hair. I am Papua."

Trained as a dancer as a child, Sardono first gained recognition when he represented his home country of Indonesia at the 1964 New York World's Fair. He soon gained critical acclaim at home and abroad at major international festivals across Asia, Europe and the Americas. A true pioneer, he was the youngest member of the Jakarta Arts Council in 1968, founded Indonesia's first-ever experimental dance company and became Rector of Jakarta Arts Institute in 2005.

As part of The Sardono Retrospective, this iconic, award-winning artist has created Black Sun, a stirring contemporary dance performance. The trigger for Black Sun is man's unceasing destruction of nature. Year after year, the forest fires in Indonesia create a shroud of severe smoke over much of Southeast Asia. The toxic haze is a humanitarian disaster: Indigenous Indonesians living in the rainforest are among the first to experience the suffering, a tragic fact that is all too clear to Sardono, who is himself a devoted environmental activist.

In Black Sun, Sardono develops a unique vocal and physical vocabulary that is very much inspired by his research with the Papuan people, as well as the environment in which they live. Together with an ensemble of dancers from Papua and other regions of Indonesia, Black Sun is Sardono's epic tribute to life, earth and survival, both primal and sophisticated.

Five Easy Pieces

CREATION

18, 19, 20 August
8pm
Victoria Theatre

BY MILO RAU / IIPM – International Institute of Political Murder CAMPO

3 reasons to GO

1. A masterful marriage of documentary and theatre, with powerful impact.
2. Seeing controversial themes through children's eyes and understanding ourselves in the process.
3. A 'hot' contemporary master-artist of theatre not to be missed.

Swiss director Milo Rau, one of the most brilliant and sought-after directors of European documentary theatre today, makes his Asian premiere in Singapore with Five Easy Pieces, an emotionally powerful drama performed by children for an adult audience.

In collaboration with the Ghent-based art centre CAMPO, Rau/IIPM centres Five Easy Pieces on Marc Dutroux, an infamous convicted murderer and paedophile. In five chapters that follow Dutroux's life and trial, Rau casts a critical lens on childhood as a protected area, carefully shielded from reality's dirty truths. Yet, the media successfully penetrate this protective veil. What do we hide from our children and what do we unwittingly confide through our actions?

Since founding the IIPM in 2007, Rau has examined socio-political conflicts with his documentary creations that are now indelibly stamped onto world theatre. He has brought revolution in Romania ("The Last Days Of The Ceausescus") and Rwandan genocide ("Hate Radio") to the stage. His staging of court cases in multi-day spectacles ("The Moscow Trials" focusing on the Pussy Riot case, "The Congo Tribunal" and "The Europe Trilogy") has received widespread acclaim.

Featuring seven young performers aged eight to 13, Five Easy Pieces employs all of Rau's past approaches: the scenic form of re-enactments; the focus on social taboos and trauma, as in the 'trials'; and the search for what is most intimate in a narrative – something universally human.

Performed in Dutch with English surtitles.

3 reasons to GO

1. A rare memoir with the master himself on stage.
2. With electrifying and mesmerising flamenco dance.
3. Elegantly and sensitively staged by established Singapore theatre artists, Claire Wong and Huzir Sulaiman.

Spontaneous and fiery. Sad and beautiful. Seductive and heartbreaking. The Last Bull: A Life In Flamenco is an extraordinary love story between one man and the art of flamenco. Written by Huzir Sulaiman and directed by Claire Wong, this seductive play revolves around Antonio Vargas, one of the world's leading flamenco dancers and choreographers.

Born in Casablanca to a family of French-speaking Spanish Jews, the 75-year-old Vargas has lived around the world, including Morocco, Spain, Australia and now, Singapore. He has worked with luminaries of the arts and entertainment worlds, from his dance interpretation of "She Loves You" with The Beatles to his acclaimed performance in Baz Luhrmann's romantic comedy "Strictly Ballroom" and sensuous choreography in John Woo's "Mission: Impossible II".

In The Last Bull: A Life In Flamenco, Huzir and Wong have embraced a rare opportunity to create a performed memoir with Vargas on stage himself, tracing his dancer's journey from childhood to old age. Huzir transforms Vargas' biography and interviews with the cast into evocative prose and poetry. Wong's direction weaves Huzir's writing into an electrifying and mesmerising theatrical frame, with flamenco dance, music and song taking centre stage.

Deeply personal and affecting, The Last Bull: A Life In Flamenco explores Vargas' life story: the five-year-old boy stumbling upon his aunt dancing flamenco and emerging as one of the world's most enchanting flamenco dancers. Much like the dance, The Last Bull is an achingly beautiful ode to a life filled with passionate pursuits.

Still Life

BY DIMITRIS PAPAIOANNOU

3 reasons to GO

1. Extraordinary visual theatre.
2. A contemporary Greek tragedy in powerful epic images.
3. An unexpected triumphant approach of seeing life.

Dimitris Papaioannou, the creator of the Athens 2004 Olympics opening and closing ceremonies and the first European Games 2015 opening ceremony, explores apocalyptic beauty in his inimitable passionate hybrid of visual physical theatre and performance art.

Still Life is choreographer Papaioannou's silent elemental vision of the birth of a strange new world, devastated by crisis and threatened by a heavy, poisoned sky. Or are the pregnant skies filled with a new life-giving breath for the future? Meanwhile, the humans on earth are building and demolishing. In the midst of it all lies the calm peace of the rituals of communion, a meal to revive the spirit for tomorrow. Horrific rupture or potent birth, Still Life seems to suggest the duality and ambiguities of the recent traumas of Papaioannou's homeland, Greece.

This stunning visual performance taps on the Greek myth of Sisyphus, a man who cheated death. To punish him, the gods gave him immortality in endless labour: rolling a rock to the top of a mountain, only for it to fall back down again. Over and over. Forever. The French philosopher Albert Camus wrote about the absurdity of Sisyphus' story, and of the human condition: "The struggle itself towards the heights is enough to fill a man's heart. One must imagine Sisyphus happy."

Papaioannou first attracted attention as a visual artist, illustrator and comic book creator. Still Life, an extension of his visual craft, explores the intensely absurd, the beauty of strangeness and the importance of finding happiness in everyday life.

1. China-born American composer Huang's haunting score performed by Singapore's T'ang Quartet.

2. Qian Yi's beautiful vocalisation.

3. Ma's stunning visuals complemented by innovative projections of New York-based video designer Austin Switser.

Huang Ruo and Jennifer Wen Ma's Paradise Interrupted, an arresting new music theatre blending traditional classical Chinese idioms from the Ming Dynasty and contemporary music, is sensually set against a beautiful garden inspired by origami and Chinese painting.

Based on a scene from the 1598 Kunqu or Kun opera "The Peony Pavilion" and reimagining Eve's expulsion from the Garden of Eden, Paradise Interrupted opens with a woman alone on stage. She meets her lover in an erotic dream, which triggers a passionate search for an unattainable ideal through a lush, ebony garden made from dynamic paper sculptures and interactive multimedia projections. The romance soon becomes an empowering tale of self-actualisation.

Composed by Huang, "one of the world's leading composers", this music theatre experience is not to be missed. Revered visual artist Ma, known for her work on the opening and closing ceremonies at the 2008 Beijing Olympics, directs and designs this exquisite opera. The dreamer is acclaimed Qian Yi, who performed in Lincoln Center Festival's renowned 20-hour production of "The Peony Pavilion" in 1999, which has since travelled the world as a seminal production. Huang himself conducts a chamber orchestra of classical music and traditional Chinese instruments in his inspired score weaving the melismatic vocal style of Kun opera with contemporary tonality. Performing Huang's magical score is internationally renowned Singapore's premier classical string quartet, T'ang Quartet.

Paradise Interrupted is a novel hybrid, at once a continuation of tradition yet entirely new, which emphasises the potential of the very old and the power of its young creators.

CREATION

BY TRAJAL HARRELL

3 reasons to GO

1. Japanese butoh dance retold through Harlem voguing.
2. Asian premiere of one of the most important dancers in contemporary dance.
3. Exhilarating, surprising choreography.

Hailed as one of his generation's most prominent choreographers and dancers, Trajal Harrell makes his Asian debut with two hauntingly mesmerising performances, In The Mood For Frankie and The Return Of La Argentina. Each rethinks the relationship between unsettling, surrealist Japanese butoh and highly stylised Harlem voguing, two seemingly different dance forms that started more than 50 years ago.

In The Mood For Frankie turns towards the female muses of late butoh founder Tatsumi Hijikata, as well as draws upon a diverse set of muses, such as butoh dancers Kazuo Ohno and Yoko Ashikawa, modern dance choreographer Katherine Dunham, filmmaker Wong Kar Wai, fashion designer and Commes des Garçons founder Rei Kawakubo, and singer Sade, as well as Harrell's own working relationships with dancers Thibault Lac and Ondrej Vidlar.

Set on a bare fashion catwalk, Harrell and his two dancers perform on a runway lined with piano benches for the audience to sit on, watching. At once, In The Mood For Frankie spills out like a park of muses settled between classical modernism and postmodern romanticism.

Harrell became known for his dance series called "Twenty Looks or Paris is Burning at The Judson Church". It re-imagined a meeting between early postmodern dance and the voguing dance tradition that was popularised by pop queen Madonna in her "Vogue" video. All seven works in the series continue to tour internationally, including "Antigone Sr.", which won the 2012 Bessie Award for Best Production. Harrell's work has been presented at international venues and festivals, such as New York's The Kitchen, Festival d'Automne in Paris and Tanz im August, Berlin.

In The Mood For Frankie is commissioned by The Museum of Modern Art, New York. Produced by Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA).

Bonus Track: —————

The Return Of La Argentina

4 September
2pm, 3pm & 4pm
72-13
30min, no intermission

BY TRAJAL HARRELL

3 reasons to GO

1. Japanese butoh dance retold through Harlem voguing.
2. Asian premiere of one of the most important dancers in contemporary dance.
3. Exhilarating, surprising choreography.

Choreographer Trajal Harrell has embarked on the long-term research and production of dance pieces related to the work of the late butoh founder Tatsumi Hijikata. In The Return Of La Argentina, Harrell addressed Hijikata's aesthetic and work with pioneering butoh dancer Kazuo Ohno.

With The Return Of La Argentina, Harrell ventures into a new realm of performativity in a solo performance that draws upon memory and invention. Harrell offers his interpretation of Ohno's signature work, "Admiring La Argentina". Ohno's piece was directed by Hijikata and had been inspired by the famous Spanish dancer Antonia Mercé, whose stage name was La Argentina.

As much for those with no prior knowledge of Ohno's original work, The Return Of La Argentina regards the viewer as essential in being both witness and admirer. It asks: What memories do we remember and archive? What do we forget? And what do we choose to invent in the here and now?

Specially designed in Singapore as a Bonus Track for In The Mood For Frankie, Harrell invokes the ghosts of these two butoh giants in this startling work. Created earlier in 2015, The Return Of La Argentina contains some of the choreographic seeds of Harrell, particularly the notion of 'voguing butoh', which have been expanded in the latest work co-produced by Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA). Hence major contemporary trends, through a body of work by one artist, can be directly experienced by Singapore audiences.

Ron Arad's 720°

CREATION

2 - 17 September
7pm - 11pm
The Meadow @ Gardens by the Bay
4h durational event
(come and go as you please)

3 reasons to GO

1. Come for the spectacle, stay for the arts.
2. Enjoy an entertaining and art-filled night out with friends and family.
3. An immersive multimedia experience at Gardens by the Bay created by today's best international contemporary artists.

Designer extraordinaire Ron Arad presents 720°, a monumental outdoor video installation that will wow you with its immense size and creativity. Gather your friends and family, and enter this magical interactive stage – shaped like a coliseum – right here in Singapore at the beautiful Gardens by the Bay.

The massive installation is an unforgettable sight. A perfect circle 18 metres in diameter, 720° is made up of 5,600 silicon cords totalling over 37 kilometres in length and suspended from a height of eight metres. These lightweight rods – swishing and swaying easily – serve as an interactive video screen for both sides of the 360-degree stage.

When this multimedia installation made its debut in 2011 as "Curtain Call", some 15,000 visitors turned up to watch works by 11 artists at London's Roundhouse. The following year, 30,000 people visited the project when it was installed in the gardens of Jerusalem's Israel Museum. 720° continues to be a spectacular crowd-pleaser for the entire family in Singapore.

Beyond its sheer scale, the experimental format of 720° allows for a breathtaking programme of projected performance films by some of the leading names of contemporary art. For Singapore International Festival of Arts 2016, the opening week of 720° features a specially created production melding live performance with digital multimedia, helmed by film director, video artist and performance-maker, Brian Gothong Tan.

The man who created 720° is Ron Arad, one of today's most influential architects, artists and designers with a fearless approach to form, structure, technology and materials. His public art pieces include the "Vortex" in Seoul and the "Keshar Sculpture" at Tel Aviv University. Major retrospectives of his work were mounted at the Barbican Art Gallery in London (2010), MoMA in New York (2009) and the Pompidou Centre in Paris (2008).

Please visit sifa.sg/sifa/show/ron-arad-720 for the specific video programme each night.

RON ARAD

3 reasons to GO

1. Unnerving giant images.
2. A collision of live performance and cinema.
3. Mixing legend and history with multimedia, this is myth-making like you've never seen before.

Hailed as one of Singapore's most talented contemporary artists today, film director and performance-maker Brian Gothong Tan has created ingenious, cutting-edge work in visually stunning spectacles such as the National Day Parade, Youth Olympic Games and SEA Games 2015. Tropical Traumas is Tan's electrifying new multimedia performance, up close on the Ron Arad's 720° massive stage at Gardens by the Bay.

At its heart, this hybrid-cinema experience is a mesmerising exploration of explorers. Told through fantastical imagery and ethereal music, Tropical Traumas follows a group of performers who re-enact the wild and exotic expeditions into the steamy Malay Archipelago, based on tales told by Sir Stamford Raffles' wife Sophia Hull and the great British naturalist Alfred Russel Wallace.

Reimagining the narratives found in all sorts of places, from movies to historical travel journals to YouTube videos to daydreams, Tan puts together a daring, playful blend of cinema and theatre that explores the possibilities of multiple realities, stories within stories and speculative histories. His vivid images – including gigantic jungle animals like orang utan and birds of paradise – are illuminated across the perfect circle of Ron Arad's 720°, set against a haunting musical score.

The result is an epic feast for the senses that will leave you entranced. Whether you are a common wanderer, a trekking tourist or a pious pilgrim in a foreign land, Tropical Traumas promises to be a surreal journey that is at once strange and familiar.

Step inside the lush, unsettling tropics.

OLIVER CHONG

3 reasons to GO

1. An unexpected outdoor venue by the bay, evocative and emotional.

2. An open home in the middle of a busy city – everyone is invited to participate, engage and discuss issues of the day with Chong.

3. Choose your own experience, whether interacting with Chong in his house or watching from outside as a curious voyeur.

Celebrated Argentine artist Fernando Rubio is a dramatist and a visual artist whose works have been staged across Europe, South America and the United States. For Singapore International Festival of Arts 2016, Rubio creates uniquely Singapore versions of Everything By My Side and Time Between Us, two gripping performance pieces that will have you enjoying new space and time perspectives.

A small house somewhere in the city. Built with wood fragments from other houses that no longer exist. Inside the house, a man resides.

For 24 hours a day for five days, spectators can visit the man and his house and stay for different situations: a story will be repeated four times a day, and scheduled discussions will take place with experts where spectators can participate in these conversations. Everything happens in the house.

This is Rubio's Time Between Us, which takes apart a man's habits and makes a piece out of that. The man decides to leave the place he knows to feel like a stranger and inhabits this solitary time, which is simultaneously shared with others. He makes an aesthetic and unique event out of this moment, looking to experience the absence and the relationship with unknown people, based on the supposition that he can be another person.

Starring the award-winning actor and director Oliver Chong from The Finger Players, Time Between Us is a meditation on aloneness, saying goodbye to what we know and embracing change, in order to recover potent memories. Come into Chong's new house and be his guest.

Performed in English.

For the fixed schedule of events, please visit sifa.sg/sifa/show/Time-Between-Us-General to register. You will need a ticket to attend these fixed events.

Apart from these fixed events, audiences can join Chong freely whenever the house is open.

Sandaime Richard

8, 9, 10 September
8pm
Victoria Theatre
2h20, intermission included

CREATION

BY HIDEKI NODA
ONG KENG SEN

3 reasons to GO

1. The imagined fascinating trial of Shakespeare.
2. The extraordinary international cast with each actor weaving a compelling narrative includes the acclaimed home-grown actress Janice Koh and top Indonesian film actress Jajang C. Noer.
3. A visual fantasy juxtaposing diverse Asian traditions with absorbing video, fashion and club music.

In this witty satire of power, Shakespeare is put on trial for falsifying history and defaming Richard Sandaime, the Grand Master of Ikebana. Shakespeare is being prosecuted by none other than Maachan of Venice. Maachan, who has forever been condemned by the writing of Shakespeare, pits wits against the writer. Who will win?

Sandaime Richard is written by Hideki Noda, described by revered Japanese director Yukio Ninagawa as 'the most talented playwright of contemporary Japan'. Noda, inspired by Yushi Odashima's translation of Shakespeare's Richard (三), effortlessly parallels the Wars of the Roses in England with the intrigue in an ikebana clan in Japan. From Noda's script, Festival Director Ong Keng Sen creates an extravaganza of comic turns with his signature style of juxtaposing Asian traditional performance forms, including the modern tradition of Takarazuka, a popular all-female entertainment revue. Inspired by William Shakespeare's Richard III but very different, Sandaime Richard will open in Singapore this September before heading to Tokyo Metropolitan Theatre for a two-week run and later embarking on a Japanese tour of four cities.

In the year that celebrates the 400th death anniversary of William Shakespeare, Singapore International Festival of Arts 2016 takes a spin on the international multitude of productions commemorating this iconic playwright of all times. In Ong's production, games of gender surround Shakespeare, a male writer besieged by 'female' characters. In comic turn after comic turn, Ong casts rising star, kabuki onnagata (female impersonator), Kazutaro Nakamura as Richard Sandaime.

Performed in Japanese, English and Bahasa Indonesia, with English surtitles.

Bill T. Jones is one of the world's foremost multi-talented artists with an illustrious and award-winning career as a dancer, choreographer, theatre director and writer. He has received major honours ranging from the 2013 National Medal of Arts to a 1994 MacArthur Genius Award and Kennedy Center Honors in 2010. Jones was recognised as Officier de l'Ordre des Arts et des Lettres by the French government in 2010, inducted into the American Academy of Arts & Sciences in 2009 and named "An Irreplaceable Dance Treasure" by the Dance Heritage Coalition in 2000. His creations on Broadway include the highly acclaimed "Spring Awakening" and "FELA!", where he won 2007 and 2010 Tony Awards for Best Choreography.

A new lecture-performance freshly made in 2016. Through rapid movement and gesture, Jones speaks about creativity: how to take an idea from inception to stage and what it means to be a maker in the world today.

1. A landmark collaboration with legendary choreographer and dancer Bill T. Jones.
2. Expect an explosive fusion of music, dance and his company of virtuosic dancers.
3. A rare chance to catch Jones' ground-breaking dance theatre and gain insight into his creative mind.

In a rare move, internationally renowned dancer and choreographer Bill T. Jones presents his full company in a site-specific work created specially for Singapore. Ever generous and adventurous, Jones has agreed in this SIFA residency to integrate LASALLE College of the Arts dance students to create a new work with his company called The Letter. A landmark full evening work yet to premiere in the United States, even though Jones has already created a version of The Letter in Paris in 2015.

A Letter/Singapore is an exciting work that brings together two impulses: the social/political and the deeply personal. With the dazzling combination of neoclassical gestures, sensuous disco physicality and passionate jive, the movements and gestures evoke a kind of postcard: a street-scene or a still from the evening news that superimposes violent street battles with street battles of civic unrest or a hospital bed untethered from reality.

Composer Nick Hallett, baritone Matthew Gamble and DJTonyMonkey will perform and mix live, a delirious spread of lullabies, rhythm and blues and house music. The eclectic sounds echo the fascinatingly varied dance styles and techniques performed by the stunning dancers of the Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Company.

The Singapore International Festival of Arts (SIFA) 2016 residency was awarded to Bill T. Jones and the Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Company.

WU MAN

MASTER MUSICIANS FROM THE SILK ROUTE

3 reasons to GO

1. Deft performances from musical virtuosos, infused with raw energy.
2. A lush exploration of Chinese and Central Asian melodies.
3. An exciting collaboration between traditional and contemporary musicians.

The world's premier pipa virtuoso and Grammy Award-nominated musician Wu Man leads a new concert exploring the rich musical traditions of China and Central Asia, created specifically for Singapore.

A soloist, educator and composer, Wu Man is seen by today's most prominent composers as an outstanding exponent of the traditional repertoire as well as a leading interpreter of contemporary pipa music. Her adventurous spirit and virtuosity has led to cross-cultural collaborations in different artistic disciplines, allowing her to reach wider audiences. She has more than 40 albums to her name, including the Grammy-nominated recordings "Our World in Song", "Traditions and Transformations: Sounds of Silk Road Chicago", her recording of Tan Dun's "Pipa Concerto" with Yuri Bashmet and the Moscow Soloists, and "You've Stolen My Heart" featuring the Kronos Quartet.

Wu Man brings together two ancient cultures in a concert exploring cultural links between Chinese and Central Asian traditions that date back more than 2,000 years. In her search to understand the roots of her instrument, Wu Man travelled to Central Asia and worked with musicians of the Uyghur tradition, culminating in a brilliant evening of this old-world music in a contemporary setting.

Borderlands features masters of Uyghur music playing indigenous instruments from the Xinjiang region. Among them is Sanubar Tursun, one of Central Asia's finest singers today and a star performer regarded by many as a symbol of the Uyghur people. With Wu Man's deft performance of the pipa, Tursun's delicate playing on the dutar (a Central Asian long-necked lute), and the hypnotic sounds of Xinjiang Uyghur *Muqam melodies, Borderlands is an extraordinary musical experience not to be missed.

*The Uyghur Muqam is the opera of Central Asia that is derived from a cross blend of Chinese, Turkic and Arabic influences, with dance tunes, instrumental sections, sung poetry and stories reflecting Uyghur history and contemporary society.

In the summer of 2012, when the punk activists of Pussy Riot were controversially sentenced to two years' imprisonment in a penal colony, director Milo Rau staged a counter-event drawing on the techniques of political theatre. From March 1 to 3, 2013, a courtroom was set up at the Moscow Sakharov Center to provide a stage for a 'show' trial that pitted the different sides of the cultural war waged in Russia against one another. However, the people on stage were from real life: artists, politicians, church leaders, lawyers, a judge and a jury composed of seven Moscow citizens. The three-day trial, which was stormed by the Russian authorities, led to a travel ban for Rau. This film The Moscow Trials documents the live event that occurred in Moscow.

The theatre project Hate Radio focused on the role of the broadcasting station Radio Télévision Libre des Mille Collines (RTLHC) in generating racial hatred during Rwanda's 1994 genocide. Hate Radio returns RTLHC to the airwaves in a reconstructed backdrop. How racism functions and how human beings are 'talked out of' their humanity – this documentary attempts to provide some of the context of this tumultuous time.

"The social function of this complex, non-profit exchange is that it strengthens the social ties... Relations are free of domination... Kula therefore has a community-generating meaning. The flow of gifts never ends; the ring has no beginning and no end."

Alfons Hug, curator

In English.

FREE ADMISSION

This art event, initiated by the Goethe-Institut Singapore and curated by Alfons Hug, opened at the Kultursymposium Weimar 2016. It premieres in Asia at the Singapore International Festival of Arts, with an added performative component in collaboration with Festival Director Ong Keng Sen.

The Kula Ring art exhibition is based on a ritual exchange of gifts among inhabitants of the Trobriand Islands in Papua New Guinea. These Melanesian islands form a circle. Today, necklaces made of little red shells, soulava, still circulate clockwise from island to island. Mwali (white seashell armbands) are exchanged in the other direction, that is, counter-clockwise. These artistic objects are highly valuable but not for sale.

This ancient cultural practice called 'kula' is being taken up by artists from around the world and given a visual, tactile dimension through aesthetic means of expression. Their works question conventional ideas of trade, value, exchange, profit and put the meaning of creative production, the sale of art, up for discussion. They have produced artworks of many forms: performances, found items, swapped objects, photographs, exotic spices and culinary delights.

Most of all, The Kula Ring is a space of imagination where the unknown is filled in, invented and created. The exhibition-performance offers insights into the sharing game and reciprocity – how is this played out today by individual artists from diverse parts of the world? What are the potentialities embedded in the gifts/objects and the actions/exchanges of The Kula Ring? Can we rethink circulation and currency without the commerce and profit propagated by our supposedly rational economic system?
