Synopsis

The award-winning ensembles of Singapore's Nine Years Theatre and the SITI Company of NYC join hands to present this multi-lingual retelling of Anton Chekhov's classic play Three Sisters.

Three Sisters, by Russian playwright Anton Chekhov, stands as one of the most outstanding plays of his career. Olga, Masha, and Irina – the titular sisters – fritter away their lives in a provincial town, while they dream of returning to the cosmopolitan city where they grew up.

Chronicling their tangled relationships, ordinary frustrations and search for meaning, Three Sisters opens a moving window into the human condition, and reveals Chekhov's profound understanding of universal themes.

In this new rendering of this classic play, Singapore Mandarin theatre company Nine Years Theatre (NYT) joins hands with the SITI Company of New York City – backed by a talented multi-lingual cast. Co-directed by NYT's Nelson Chia and SITI's Barney O'Hanlon, these two award-winning theatre ensembles investigate an utterly human story of survival in a changing world.

Don't miss this timeless play that reveals the absurdity, courage and tenderness of the human condition – now seen through the eyes of contrasting cultures, languages, and the actors' powerful physicality.

Journey with SIFA

Artistic Director Nelson Chia shares: "This work is also about the coming together of two companies who are culturally and linguistically different, but joined in a common language of training and creation. I believe the outcome will be very exciting."

Festival Director Gaurav Kripalani also reiterates that "SIFA is a gathering of finest artists and works from Singapore and around the globe. This production, which sees Nine Years Theatre collaborating with SITI Company established by Anne Bogart and Tadashi Suzuki, celebrates and epitomises that vision. As a milestone in their fifteen-year relationship, I am honoured to present Three Sisters in this momentous reunion of two phenomenal theatre companies."

quality and a cultural sensibility in translation and adaptation. As the only company in Singapore that works with an ensemble of actors who train regularly on a long-term basis via systematic methods, their works are grounded in the actors' art. In order to engage audiences beyond productions, the company has continuously explored various ways of holding dialogue sessions with them. Their efforts are rooted in the belief that audiences should not merely consume art, but be offered the opportunity to discuss art.
